Part 2 Reading Comprehension

Read the passages and select the best choice (a, b, c or d).

Passage 1:

In the year 1666 a great fire swept through London and destroyed more than half the city, including three quarters of St. Paul's Cathedral. Sir Christopher Wren, the original designer of the Cathedral and perhaps the finest architect of all time, was commissioned to rebuild the great edifice. He began in 1675 and finished in 1710, a remarkably short period of time for such a task. When the magnificent edifice was completed, Queen Anne, the reigning monarch, visited the Cathedral and told Wren that his work was "awful, artificial, amusing." Sir Christopher, so the story goes, was delighted with the royal compliment, because in those days awful meant "full of awe, awe-inspiring," artificial meant "artistic," and amusing, from the muses, meant "amazing"

That was three hundred years ago. Today, the older, flattering meanings of awful, artificial, and amusing have virtually disappeared from popular use. Indeed, the general rule of language is that when a single word develops two polar meanings, one will become obsolete. Occasionally, though diametrically opposed meanings of the same two English word survive, and the technical term for these schizophrenics is contronym. More popularly, they are known as Janus-faced words because the Greek god Janus had two faces that looked in opposite directions.

37. How long did it take to rebuild the edifice?

- a. 15 years b. 20 years c. 25 years d. 35 years

38. What did Queen Anne think about the architect's work?

- a. It was the worst work in the world.
b. It was as good as other work
c. It was very great
d. It was very frightening.

Passage 2:

It was a town of red brick, or of brick that would have been red if I smoke and ashes had allowed it; but as matters stood it was a town unnatural red and black like the painted face of a savage.

It was a town of machinery and tall chimneys, out of which interminable serpents of smoke trailed themselves for ever and ever, and never got uncoiled.
